Beecher's Blistering Sarcasm.

Henry Ward Beecher's letter to the Traveller, in answer to his critics, is full of the most cutting irony, and must cause the theologians who have been attacking him to realize that he has by no means lost his controversial powers. He brings out in a most stinging manner the discordance which exists between the many denominations. He says, very meekly, that he is going to put together the fragments of himself which remain, and he proceeds: "When I get my new personal identity together and in working shape, I intend to study theology somewhere, though in my present confusion I cannot yet see whether I shall study at Andover, at Cambridge, at New Haven or at Boston." And he concludes, "but wherever I may go I am determined to find before I die a theology which will pass muster at Bangor, Andover, Cambridge, New Haven, Princeton, Alleghany, Oberlin, Chicago and Park street. Then I shall willingly die." If Mr. Beecher could have a lease of life co-extensive with his search for this wonderful theology, he would be immortal; for no such quest will ever be crowned with success. The value of the criticisms which have been showered upon him of late, however, may be gathered from a consideration of the utter failure of his critics to find a common point of agreement. If they disapprove of his views they are no less at odds with one another. For the moment they may have ceased their strife among themselves in order to assail whom they seem to regard as a general enemy, perhaps because he is too liberal and farsighted for any of their narrow and hidebound positions. But there is no more possibility of their ultimate union than there is of their harmony with Mr. Beecher. He has laid his finger on the fatal defect of their attitude, however, and he has given all of them a back-handed blow which has very nearly settled them. At all events they will find it very hard to resume their carping criticism of the Plymouth Church pastor of this letter, and the probability is that they will be led by it into a more bitter renewal of the old quarrels between themselves.

The Amber Monopoly.

At Konigsberg, not long since, the right to collect amber on the beach near Scharzort during a space of twelve years from the 1st of December next, was sold to the firm of Becker & Co., which has held the contract during the last twenty-four years. The price paid is 150,000 marks a year—say $37,000. The Prussian coast of the Baltic, between Memel and Konigsberg, yields more amber than any other known locality, and it is from this source that the great demand for the material in the East is supplied. Originally Konigsberg did a vast business in amber, having some seventy turners; but Dantzig is now the chief seat of the industry, and notably of the manufactures of mouth-pieces for pipes.

In older times the Grand Master of the Teutonic Order enjoyed a monopoly in the amber trade; then it passed to the Crown, and very stringent regulations were enacted to prevent its infringement. "Strand riders" patrolled the coast, and a range of gallows was kept standing on which the hapless peasant taken with a piece of the precious material in his possession was hanged out of hand. Even now it is a theft for a person to retain amber he has picked up on the coast, and a trespass to venture there in certain districts. The amber, washed out of extensions of coal beds beneath the sea, comes up to the shore in the sea-weed cast up after a storm. The men drag the weed on shore in nets, and the women and children pick out the amber. In winter, when the sea is frozen over, holes are broken in the ice, and the weed is hauled up with picks and spears.

Railway Subsidies.

It is stated by persons claiming to be informed on the subject that two prominent lawyers in Washington are examining precedents with a view to appealing to the United States Supreme Court for an injunction restraining the Surveyor General of the Land Office from issuing any more land patents to the Northern Pacific, Texas Pacific or Atlantic Pacific Railways, and also directing that these corporations reconvey to the United States all lands patented for sections constructed since the time fixed in the charters for the completion of the roads. If this is done all questions relating to lands granted to railways will be brought up for judicial action.

Riot in Vienna.

A riotous demonstration of a serious character occurred in Vienna Thursday. Three hundred members of the Shoemakers' Union, which the authorities dissolved a few days ago, gathered in High street, shouting, "We must have blood." "We must have a blaze." The police were badly used, and several were wounded. Troops dispersed the mob.

Needed Philanthropy at Home.

Christian philanthropists who squander millions of dollars each year in a vain endeavor to christianize the heathen in foreign lands, might serve their God and their country to better advantage at home. A fruitful object for the consideration of these zealous christians is the plantation negroes whom the downfall of slavery left without homes or a means of support at a time of life when they could do little or nothing to help themselves. An Atlanta gentleman is preparing to raise a fund for the establishment of a home for these aged relics of the past. "Kept in slavery," says the Atlanta Constitution, "until they were too old to adapt themselves to the new order of things—turned penniless on the world when the old limbs were too stiff and weak for efficient work, without sons able or willing to support them, simple-minded, affectionate, sincere—there is much in their pitiable condition to excite sympathy. They are seldom beggars, and still less seldom dishonest. With their hearts in the old plantation days, few wants and simple habits, they prefer to sit in the sunshine and suffer in the body, while feeding their souls in day dreams. It is the affection and sympathy that all people must feel for the shabby, honest, fast-fading figure of the old plantation darkey, that brings tears quite as often as applause from those who witness Milt Barlow's incomparable impersonation of 'Old Black Joe,' and that has made Uncle Remus the tenderest and best-beloved of story-tellers."

The Triennial Conclave.

A committee of fifteen appointed at a meeting of the National Association of General Passenger and Ticket Agents, held at Montreal last September, to agree upon rates to the Triennial Conclave of Knights Templar at San Francisco, next August, met in Chicago Monday. After a long discussion it was agreed that the rate from any point east of the Missouri River to Kansas City or Omaha and return should be one fare for the round trip to Knights Templar and their ladies exclusively, and from Kansas City or Omaha to San Francisco and return, $75.

A Suicide's Letter.

The following note was picked up by a farmer living near Pekin, W. T.: "On this 21st day of August I contemplate suicide, which I will do after writing this by jumping in the Columbia River. Any person finding this will confer a favor by advising my parents at Chicago. Address E. H. Bronston, Chicago. Walla Walla papers please copy." Bronston was a farmer and had had trouble with his neighbors, and disappeared three months ago.

Pagittistic.

John L. Sullivan and James Elliott were in Chicago Friday and entered into an agreement to fight with small soft gloves four rounds, Marquis of Queensbury rules, in a 20-foot ring, December 9th, either in Chicago, Milwaukee or Pittsburg. Sullivan agrees to give Elliott $500 and the gate receipts if he does not knock him (Elliott) out of time before the expiration of the four rounds.

Republicans should keep an eye to windward and look out for political traders. No voter should allow himself to be imposed upon in that way. When a man offers to vote a portion of your ticket if you will vote one man on his, copper him. It's a sure thing he does not intend to do what he agrees to. You are perhaps the fifteenth man to whom he has made the proposition, and when he has them all committed will go off and vote his ticket straight.

THE ARCTIC SCANDAL.

Officers of the Jeannette Demanded —Death of DeLong and His Party Laid at Melville's Door.

Dr. W. F. Collins, of Minneapolis, Minn., brother of the late Professor Jerome J. Collins, scientist of the Jeannette expedition, in a recent interview made some startling statements relative to the Jeannette scandal. He says: We have evidence that Captain De Long used his official position, as commander of the expedition, to persecute, in every conceivable way, some of the members of the commission. My brother was placed under arrest for no reason whatever. Lieutenant Danenhower admitted this to me in New York. Captain De Long refused to allow my brother at certain times to do any kind of work, and purposely allowed all notes, photographs and records of the expedition, prepared by my brother, to sink. We have evidence that the Captain forced him to remain behind when he volunteered to go ahead with Ninderman and Noros in search of relief, my brother being in the best condition of any member of the party to do so. There is evidence that Bartlett, one of the seamen, who is now in Siberia, is in possession of valuable facts, but we believe he has been kept in Siberia purposely by officers of the expedition so that his testimony may not get before the Board. We are also in possession of full information that on Melville finding the bodies of the De Long party he used the most blasphemous, scandalous language concerning my brother's body. We also have reason for believing that the reports made by Melville as to the condition of the weather, which he alleged prevented him from going to the relief of the De Long party, were false, for the dates on which he declared the weather to be bad are shown to have been good by the records. Collins also asserts that jealousy existed between certain officers of the expedition, the trouble first beginning, as he learns, over an order to the effect that all the men should undergo a physical examination monthly. Neither Collins nor Danenhower was permitted to assist in the retreat. Dr. Collins adds: We happen to know that Kasmah requested Melville to go to DeLong's relief himself or to send some one, and that Melville would do neither. He first gave an order to Danenhower to go, and then countermanded it. Kasmah and Shagra were fifteen days in the making of the round trip to Belun, to the spot where Melville's party was. Two days each way was ample time for the journey. During the trip these men got drunk, and Melville knew it. While they were gone in search of DeLong, Melville and those with him made chess men and checker boards and amused themselves, leaving the work of searching for their companions to two ignorant drunken natives. We have reasonable ground for being certain that there was a considerable amount of intoxicants drunk during the fifteen days they waited for the return of the two natives. We know from conversations with surviving members of the expedition that certain letters and papers, which we believe were on my brother's person, never have been produced. We want to know what has been done with these papers. If Melville had gone with the natives as he ought to have done there is no doubt that DeLong and his party would have been saved. He would have seen the beacon fire which he had lighted on the bluffs, as stated in DeLong's journal, which was found, even if he had started out when Kasmah and Shagra were overdue. We therefore make the charge that had Melville done his duty instead of playing chess and checkers, DeLong and his party would not have died. Melville left them to die. He is responsible for their deaths. Collins will print this statement in pamphlet form, with documentary evidence and lay it before Congress.

A large number of Reno people attended the ball at Antelope Friday night, and the universal verdict of all is that the whole affair was a grand success, and all are loud in their praises of the hospitable manner in which they were received and entertained by the landlord and lady, Col. Dave Evans and wife.

James Rodin, who was discharged from the Asylum here a few weeks ago and returned to his home at Austin, is again showing unmistakable signs of a return of the malady. The Revellie says his insanity appears to be of a mild type, generally speaking, but at times he becomes quite violent. Unless otherwise cared for by his friends, he is likely to find his way back to the Asylum again before long.

Dan De Quille, of the Enterprise, who is perhaps the best judge of agricultural matters in the State says the snowflake potato raised on Silby Flat, Nevada county, Cal., weighing six pounds, is nothing to brag about, for in Washoe Valley are to be found "spuds" that are suckling half a dozen young ones that weigh more than six pounds each. Just such a "spud" as Dan describes is now on exhibition at Chase & Thyes' saloon.

A Sad Affliction.

Mrs. S. M. Draunau, who resided in the Western Addition, Reno, a most estimable lady and the honored mother of Joseph H. and Mary Alice Brotherton, died, yesterday from a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. She was a native of Jacksonville, Florida, and 49 years of age. Her death will leave a void in the hearts of her children and many friends hard to fill. As wife, mother and friend her loss is deeply regretted.

J. E. Anderson Shot.

A fatal shooting affray occurred in Eureka about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, on Main street, between James E. Anderson, editor of the Eureka Evening Leader, and George J. Reek, Republican candidate for County Superintendent of Public Schools. Anderson was shot through the bladder and lower bowels, the bullet entering on the right side in the pit of the stomach and ranging downward. Reek was not hit. Anderson is reported to be in a dying condition. Reek, after emptying his six-shooter, ran away up the street, Anderson pursuing and trying to fire a third time, but desisting on account of the crowded condition of the street, or because the hammer of his pistol got out of gear. The cause of the trouble was in regard to politics. The stories as to who fired the first shot are conflicting. Later advices state that most of the firing was done while Thomas Dale was between the two parties, and that he was grasped by Reek. There was a change in Anderson's condition for the better at last accounts yesterday. The ball which passed nearly through him entered at the pit of the stomach. It was cut out near the rectum. The doctors think that the bowels have not been pierced and that the ball passed only through the throat of the bladder. The wound is very serious, however, and the patient's chances of recovery are looked upon as one in a thousand.

Baker's Jewel.

A strange manner in which a stolen jewel was recovered is thus related by the Winnemucca Silver State: "Last Wednesday ex-Senator G. W. Baker, of Eureka, while on the way from Wadsworth to this place, received permission to lie in one of the train men's beds in the caboose, where he went to sleep. When he awoke, a diamond pin, valued at $100, which he knew was in his scarf when he went to sleep, was missing. Diligent search was made for the pin without any effect, and he was at a loss to account for its disappearance, as the caboose was swept out and the bed shaken without finding a trace of it. Last night a man named Norton was arrested here by Constable Brown for being implicated in a row. He was taken to jail and searched by Deputy Sheriff Fellows and Brown, and the officers found Baker's diamond pin hid in a watch pocket in his pantaloons. It is alleged that Norton was on the train with Baker, and took the pin while the latter was asleep. A charge of grand larceny was preferred against him."

Winter on the Comstock.

Saturday's Enterprise says: "The town yesterday, about noon, presented a decidedly and picturesquely wintry aspect. Snow was piled high on all the roofs, the trees, whose boughs yet retained their leaves, were loaded with the white powder from the heavens, and all the lamp-posts wore huge snow hats. It was a wonderful transformation scene. Not a speck of snow was visible when our people retired the night before. The streets were dry and dusty, and as far as the eye could see all was a dreary brown. When they arose and gazed out upon the new, white world, the glare was almost blinding. We went to bed in the tropics and arose not a stone's throw from the North Pole. One would hardly have been surprised at seeing a white bear lumbering down the side of Mount Davidson, or at finding the walrus and sea lions bumping their heads up through the level of O street."

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral of the late Anthony McGwin, who was killed a day or two since in Douglas county by his Danish tenant at the "Lute Olds" ranch, took place Wednesday in Carson. It was quite largely attended. He has heretofore been mentioned in the papers as "Irish Johnny," was born in Ireland and aged 34 years. He leaves a sister in Iowa, who has been advised of the sad event by telegraph.

A Comstock Horror.

VIRGINIA, November 4.
Night before last at 9 o'clock, the wife of Daniel Glassett, a miner, left her home in a fit of insanity, and taking her three small children struck out for the mountains north of the city. She wandered back into town at 5 o'clock last evening, having been out through all the heavy snowstorm. She came back with but two children, boys 7 and 8 years of age. At first the woman said her babe had frozen to death, but finally said it cried and she cut its head off with a hatchet she had carried with her. Officers this morning went in search and in an old stone quarry north of the city where the woman said she and the children slept by the side of a big boulder, the body of the baby was found. The head was severed except by a strip of skin at the back of the neck. Mrs. Glassett says that before cutting the child's head off she drew a blanket over the faces of the two little boys, so they should not see her do the deed. She says she would have killed the boys, but thought too much of them. Mrs. Glassett was examined by physicians as to her sanity a few days ago. They found her mind in such a state that they recommended watching her. A neighbor saw her leave her home with her children. She told him no one liked her and she was going away to live in the mountains. The husband of the woman is here. He was arrested last night and locked up as insane when telling about what his wife had done, but was presently released.

J. BENJ. RAFFERTY.

Vanderbilt's stable on Fifty-second street, New York, cost $60,000, not counting the land. The horses' stalls are of light polished wood trimmed with black walnut and lavishly ornamented with brass. The box stall occupied by Maud S. is 20 by 24 feet. Even the buckets are of polished wood and bear the Vanderbilt monogram in brass. Everything is quiet, rich and luxurious. Within a few blocks of it are thousands of human beings warring bread, and lying almost unsheltered and in rags. Such contrasts are the starting points of revolutions. After a while the masses of the country will get tired of them and cry a halt.

Labor troubles are cropping out at Montreal again, higher wages being demanded. The ship laborers have struck for double pay for night work, and a large force of Government police had to prevent the men who remained at work from being maltreated. All the cotton weavers in the Merchant Company's mill, numbering 300, have struck for a scale of prices made out by themselves.

In Philadelphia, in our house, only three of thirty-six persons registered were legal voters. In one locality, of fifty names taken from the list only four were found. A Democratic Assessor and a Republican Supervisor are under arrest.

In Paris the Salvation Army created a sensation Friday by parading the streets. They were generally treated with respect, although in the heart of the revolutionary quarter.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the little sufferer at once—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not another on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere. 25 cents a bottle. JACK-19-BU-WAY
